

Hawkins is a small fictional midwestern town located in the US state of Indiana positioned about 80 miles outside of Indianapolis. The nearby Hawkins National Laboratory ostensibly performs scientific research for the United States Department of Energy but also secretly experiments with the paranormal and supernatural, sometimes with human test subjects.

